THE ALMOST PAINLESS GUIDE
TO THE U.S. CONSTITUTION
Grades 5-Up
Running Time: 20 minutes

GENERAL DESCRIPTION OF THE PROGRAM

The Almost Painless Guide to the U.S. Constitution uses contemporary video footage, archival video footage and photographs, original graphics, and dialog narration to provide students in grades five and up with information on the U.S. Constitution.

The program examines the inception of the Constitution as it succeeded the Articles of Confederation. It discusses the importance of the Constitution as the foundation of a federal system of government and the concept of “We the People” as the ultimate authority.

The articles of the Constitution that defined the three branches of government are discussed, as is the concept of “checks and balances.”

The Preamble is explored in depth, as are the first ten amendments that comprise the Bill of Rights and subsequent amendments to the Constitution.

The program concludes with “The Almost Painless Review,” which offers an excellent synopsis of the entire program. Also, a Video Quiz is provided prior to the closing credits in order to help you assess student comprehension immediately following the video presentation.

INSTRUCTIONAL NOTES

It is suggested that you preview the video and read the related Suggested Instructional Procedures before involving your students in the lesson activities. In this way, you will become familiar with the materials and be better prepared to adapt the program to the needs of your class.

You will probably find it helpful to follow the video and lesson activities in the order in which they are presented in this Teacher’s Guide, but this is not necessary.

It is also suggested that the video presentation take place before the entire class and under your direction. The lesson activities focus on the content of the video; therefore, the presentations should be a common experience for all students.

As you review the instructional program outlined in the Teacher’s Guide, you may find it necessary to make some changes, deletions, or additions to fit the specific needs of your students. We encourage you to do so, for only by tailoring this program to your students will they obtain the instructional benefits afforded by the materials.

SUGGESTED INSTRUCTIONAL PROCEDURES

Teacher Preparation

- Preview the video The Almost Painless Guide to the U.S. Constitution.
- Duplicate any blackline masters you intend to use.
- Read the descriptions of the blackline masters.

Student Preparation

The students should be supplied with the necessary copies of blackline masters required to complete the activities supplied. Teachers can extend any of the lessons on the Constitution by analyzing current events articles.

STUDENT OBJECTIVES

After viewing the program The Almost Painless Guide to the U.S. Constitution and participating in the follow-up activities, students should be able to:

- Identify the essential ideas of American constitutional government.
- Identify that the people are sovereign; they are the ultimate source of power.
- Identify that the Constitution is a higher law that authorizes a government of limited powers.
- Identify the purposes of government, as stated in the Preamble, as:
 - To form a more perfect union;
 - To establish justice;
 - To insure domestic tranquility;
 - To provide for the common defense;
 - To promote the general welfare;
 - To secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.
- Describe the means of limiting the powers of government under the Constitution. Explain how the following provisions of the Constitution give government the power it needs to fulfill the purposes for which it was established:
 - Delegate or enumerate powers (Articles I, II, and III)
 - The General welfare provision (Article I, Section 8)
 - The necessary and proper clause (Article I, Section 8, Clause 18)
- Define the separation and sharing of powers.
- Define checks and balances.
- Define the Bill of Rights.
- Explain how specific provisions of the Constitution (Bill of Rights, etc.) limit the powers of government in order to protect the rights of individuals.

FOLLOW-UP ACTIVITIES BLACKLINE MASTERS

The following Blackline Master activities are included with this guide. You may replicate and distribute them to your class as needed. An Answer Key appears on pages 8-13.

1. Blackline Master #1: Pre-Test is an assessment tool intended to gauge student comprehension of the Objectives prior to the launching of the U.S. Constitution lesson, which includes the video and the ensuing activities. The results of the Pre-Test may be contrasted with the results of the Post-Test to assess the efficacy of the lesson in achieving the Student Objectives.
2. Blackline Master #2: Video Quiz is a printed copy of the questions which appear at the end of the video presentation. The Video Quiz is intended to reinforce the salient points of the video immediately following its completion and may be used for assessment or as a catalyst for discussion.
3. Blackline Masters #3a-3g: The United States Constitution is the actual text of the document, including the Bill of Rights.
4. Blackline Master #4: Vocabulary is a list of pertinent terms and definitions.
5. Blackline Master #5: Discussion Questions offers questions to spur conversation and to identify student comprehension and misunderstanding.
6. Blackline Master #6: Word Search prompts students to search for hidden words and phrases from the lesson.
7. Blackline Master #7: The Preamble of the United States Constitution is the text of the introduction to the United States Constitution.
8. Blackline Master #8: Constitution Article Activity asks students to select which article of the Constitution contains various ideas.
9. Blackline Master #9: Bill of Rights is the text of the first ten amendments.
10. Blackline Masters #10a-10c: Bill of Rights Activity is an activity to help students explore their understanding of the Bill of Rights.
11. Blackline Master #11: Checks and Balances is an activity created to increase student understanding of the balance of power.
12. Blackline Masters #12a-12b: Federalists vs. Anti-Federalists is an activity that will offer students insight into the debate behind the formation of the Constitution.
13. Blackline Masters #13a-13b: Post-Test is an assessment tool to be administered after the lesson (Pre-Test, video and follow-up activities) have been completed.

EXTENDED LEARNING ACTIVITIES

1. Blackline Master #14: Bill of Rights Extended Learning Activity is an activity for advanced students.
2. Roots of the Preamble Extended Learning Activity. This activity was created to help students understand the origins of the basic principles of the Preamble, thus understanding the basic principles of American democracy.

Directions: Provide students with Blackline Masters #15a-15b: Of Civil Government by John Locke, Blackline Master #16: *Du Contract Social by Jean Jacques Rousseau, and Blackline Master #17: The Social Contract Defined. Have the students compare the two excerpts by Locke and Rousseau. They should create a list of concepts that these philosophers shared. Then provide a copy of the Preamble to the Constitution (Blackline Master #7) and have the students list or underline statements in the Preamble that reflect the concepts present in the works by Locke and Rousseau. These basic principles can then be discussed. Lastly, define the Social Contract. Ask the students to write a 100-200 word essay to answer the following question: "Does the Social Contract reflect the concept of 'We the People'? Why or why not?"

3. The Framers of the U.S. Constitution. This activity was created to give students a better understanding about who the framers of the Constitution were. By understanding the backgrounds and points of view of the framers of the Constitution, one can better understand how and why the Constitution was constructed.
Directions: Assign each student or group of students the name of a framer of the Constitution. Instruct them to use encyclopedias, books, computer databases, or the Internet as research aids in answering the questions on Blackline Master #18: The Framers of the U.S. Constitution. When the students have completed their research, place them in groups. Have them create a list of characteristics shared by their framers; have them complete Blackline Master #19: Framers Chart. Have the groups compare the charts. What conclusions can the class make about the framers of the Constitution? The homework assignment can be for the students to respond to the following question: "The characteristics of the framers of the Constitution is in line with the concept of the 'We the People'. True or false?"

Blackline Master #5: Discussion Questions

1. What is the purpose of a constitutional government?

A constitutional government limits the powers of the government, while protecting the individual rights of the people.

2. What is the Preamble to the Constitution? What is its purpose?

The Preamble is the introduction to the U.S. Constitution. It explains the purpose of the Constitution. Generally, it explains that the Constitution is designed to protect and insure the rights of the people and their government.

3. What is a federal system of government?

A federal system of government shares its power and responsibilities with the individual states.

4. What are the three branches of government?

The three branches of government are the executive branch, the legislative branch, and the judicial branch.

5. How do the three branches work within the system of checks and balances?

The three branches are designed to prevent any one branch from becoming too powerful. Examples of this are the presidential veto, the two-thirds override of the veto, judicial review (constitutionality), and confirmation of presidential appointments.

6. What is the Bill of Rights?

The Bill of Rights is the first ten amendments of the Constitution. It outlines the rights of every American citizen and describes what the government can and cannot do.

7. What are the two ways in which an amendment can be ratified?

In order for an amendment to be proposed, either two-thirds of both houses must ratify the amendment or two-thirds of the states must ratify the amendment. However, it takes three-fourths of the states to adopt an amendment to become part of the Constitution.

8. What is the purpose of the other sixteen amendments other than the Bill of Rights?

The other sixteen amendments are designed to further the freedoms of Americans. Amendments 13 - 15 are known as the " Civil Rights Amendments" because they extend rights to African-Americans.

9. According to the Constitution, what role do the people play in the country's political processes?

The people of the United States elect the officials in government either by direct or indirect election. In addition, the people are the ultimate authority and they let the people in government govern over them for their common good.

10. How does the Bill of Rights and the Constitution ensure the idea of "We the People"?

Answers will vary. Americans give the persons in government the power to make laws that are in their best interest. Ultimately, these people are elected and are supposed to be responsive to the citizens of this country. The Bill of Rights ensures that the government does not overstep its bounds by depriving the citizens of their rights. The Bill of Rights also ensures that the people can criticize the government without retribution. It assures people of rights within the judicial system and it grants them certain freedoms to protect these rights.

The Almost Painless Guide to the U.S. Constitution
Script of Narration

HARLAN:

Well, this is great, Marie! Finally a subject I personally guarantee to be painless and exciting!

MARIE:

I'm sorry, have we met? The Harlan I know usually finds required subjects like math, history, and the U.S. Constitution to be, and I quote, "torture."

HARLAN:

That's ridiculous, Marie, I'm fascinated by the Constitution.

MARIE:

You are?

HARLAN:

Aye, me hearties, tales of the seven seas, capturing the British ship Java off Brazil back in 18 ought 12, just me and me shipmates on Old Ironsides.

MARIE:

Harlan! You're talking about the U.S.S. Constitution, Old Ironsides! That's a boat.

HARLAN:

Technically, it's a ship, Marie.

MARIE:

Regardless, this program is about the U.S. Constitution, spelled with one "s"! Ring a bell? It's our country's set of basic rules and laws.

HARLAN:

I knew that.

MARIE:

Great, then I'm sure you'll agree it is an exciting subject.

HARLAN:

Interesting maybe, "exciting" might be a bit of a stretch. How's this?

MARIE:

Fair enough, I guess!

HARLAN:

Now, this may be a dumb question, but...

MARIE:

They say there are no dumb questions, Harlan. Of course, "they" never met you.

HARLAN:

Very funny, Marie. Seriously, I don't see why we need a Constitution at all. You know, it's old, it's all yellowed with age, I can hardly read the thing. I mean, talk about weird penmanship!

MARIE:

Stop! Harlan, would you play football or baseball without a set of rules?

HARLAN:

Well, no. Every sport has a rulebook, but what does that have to do with the Constitution?

MARIE:

Okay. Well, think of it this way. Our Constitution sets up a kind of "rulebook" for the whole country. It lays out the basic way our government is organized and operated, and establishes what's known as a constitutional government.

HARLAN:

Clever name.

MARIE:

Accurate name. You see, a constitutional government limits the powers of the government, while protecting the individual rights of the people.

HARLAN:

So, everybody, then - uh, all the "players" - have to play by the Constitution "rule book." Now that I can understand.

MARIE:

You've got it. The Constitution sets up a higher law of the land that everybody, or as you - Mr. "Sports Is My Life" - would put it, all the "players" must obey.

HARLAN:

Everybody, huh?

MARIE:

Yep, the President, Congressmen and women, even the Supreme Court justices all have to play by the same rules.

HARLAN:

How 'bout us?

MARIE:

Certainly “us.” Harlan, do you realize “we” are the most important “players” in our system of government?

HARLAN:
Us?

MARIE:
Yep.

HARLAN:
You and me?

MARIE:
We.

HARLAN:
Is that first year French, or do you mean “we” as in “we”?

MARIE:
We, as in “We the People.” You know, those three words are vitally important to understanding our entire system of government, Harlan. You see, unlike some countries, we, the citizens of the United States, granted our government and its leaders the privilege of governing us for our common good. But, and this is very important, “We The People” are the ultimate authority.

HARLAN:
No kings, queens, or dictators for us!

MARIE:
That’s right. You see, after we had declared our independence from England, our central government operated under the Articles of Confederation. But, the Articles left the government far too weak to govern effectively. So we began to revise the Articles which led to the drafting of our Constitution. Here, Harlan, read this. (pause) Out loud, Harlan!

HARLAN:
Oh, sorry! “We, the people...” I feel kinda silly Marie.

MARIE:
Humor me.

HARLAN:
“We the people of the United States...”

MARIE:
“In order to form a more perfect union....”

HARLAN:
"Establish justice..."

MARIE:
"Insure domestic tranquility..."

HARLAN:
"Provide for the common defense..."

MARIE:
"Promote the general welfare..."

HARLAN:
"And secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States Of America."

MARIE:
Well said, Harlan! That's called the "Preamble to the Constitution," a kind of introduction, and I think it beautifully explains just what the purpose of our Constitution is.

HARLAN:
Well, I'll have to admit it sounds better than it looks. I mean, what is it with that handwriting? I'll bet it took forever just to write it. I wonder how many quills they went through.

MARIE:
Actually, it took less than four months, and, just think, our Constitution has lasted well over 200 years! In fact, our Constitution is the oldest continual form of government in use today.

HARLAN:
That's pretty impressive! I guess the writers... the authors... what did you call them?

MARIE:
The "framers" of the Constitution, Harlan!

HARLAN:
'Cause they were so square?

MARIE:
Oh, boy! Because, after studying many different past forms of government, they combined many ideas and ideals, to create a framework for our new government.

HARLAN:
Got it.

MARIE:

Now then, 55 men attended the Constitutional Convention.

HARLAN:

Held in exciting Las Vegas!

MARIE:

Held in beautiful Philadelphia, Harlan.

HARLAN:

Philadelphia, huh? Well, if they weren't going to Vegas, you'd think they would have at least held it in Washington, D.C., being the nations' capitol and everything.

MARIE:

Yes Harlan, but at the time the Constitution was drafted, Philadelphia was our capitol. In fact, it was the capitol from 1790 until 1800.

HARLAN:

I knew that.

MARIE:

Right. Just as I'm sure you know that, after much debate, the framers decided upon a federal system of government.

HARLAN:

How'd they come up with that name?

MARIE:

Well, I'm glad you asked. It's called a federal system of government because it shares its power and responsibilities with the individual states.

HARLAN:

Oh, I guess that's why states like, say, Florida don't print their own money, or start a post office, or decide to declare war on Finland.

MARIE:

Right. You won't see any "Florida Fives" or "Sunshine State Stamps," much less a "Florida Flotilla." But, at the same time, the states do reserve many powers for themselves, like operating schools, setting local laws, collecting taxes...

HARLAN:

How well I know.

MARIE:

No comment. Now, at the Constitutional Convention...

HARLAN:

Vegas would have been cooler.

MARIE:

Actually warmer. And, of course, the city didn't even exist in 1787.

HARLAN:

Well, now, that's a pretty good reason.

MARIE:

As I was saying, at the Constitutional Convention, the individual colonies that later became states were understandably very concerned about creating too strong a central government.

HARLAN:

Yeah, they'd had it with that royal jazz.

MARIE:

So, to protect and preserve the states' rights, but at the same time establish an effective national government, our Constitution was designed with three co-equal branches, so the power of each would be limited, or "checked," by the other branches, creating a balance of power.

HARLAN:

I guess the branches act sort of like umpires for each other.

MARIE:

Right. The President is the head of the executive branch and the Constitution empowered him to enforce the nation's laws. He's also the Commander-In-Chief of the armed forces and our ceremonial head of state. You know, a really big wig!

HARLAN:

Yeah, now he wore a really big, big wig! And check out those Supreme Court justices.

MARIE:

They're part of the judicial branch, Harlan. The Supreme Court is the highest court in the land, and is called upon to interpret laws as they apply to the Constitution.

HARLAN:

And, last, but certainly not least, are the Congressmen and women who are members of the House of Representatives, and the Senators who make up the Senate.

MARIE:

That's right. The House and the Senate together comprise the lawmaking branch of the federal government - the legislative branch. I'm impressed you remembered, Harlan!

HARLAN:

How could I forget? It was drilled into me as a small child. Anyway, tell me more about these checks and balances.

MARIE:

Well, as I was saying, the three branches are co-equals and can check each other's powers. This way, no one branch can become too powerful. For example, any legislation that is passed by Congress must also be signed by the President before it can become a law.

HARLAN:

When we say Congress, we mean the legislative branch, right?

MARIE:

Right.

HARLAN:

Well, how can they check the President?

MARIE:

Suppose the President decides to veto a law passed by Congress.

Congress can override his veto with a two-thirds majority vote.

HARLAN:

Check! Sorry, I just like saying that.

MARIE:

As I was saying: The legislative branch must also approve or disapprove appointments made by the executive branch.

HARLAN:

The President.

MARIE:

That's right. For example, the Senate must approve or disapprove the President's appointment of a Supreme Court justice. In that way, the legislative branch has a check over both the executive and the judicial branches.

HARLAN:

And speaking of the Supreme Court, they're part of the judicial branch, right? What kind of checks do they have?

MARIE:

Well, when reviewing lower court decisions that have been appealed, the court may be called upon to interpret laws passed by Congress and signed by the President to be sure they are constitutional, that is, fit the language and spirit of our Constitution. In this way, they can check the legislative and executive branches.

HARLAN:

Check! Sorry! Well, even I see how this checks and balances system really seems to work, Marie. So, I guess that just about wraps it up. Those Constitution guys wrote the perfect document, except for that handwriting! Man!

MARIE:

No that doesn't "wrap it up." The framers of the Constitution had the foresight to realize that they hadn't created a "perfect" document. As Benjamin Franklin said: "Our new Constitution is now established, and it has an appearance that promises permanency; but in this world nothing can be said to be certain except death and taxes."

HARLAN:

You know he looks just like the picture on the money.

MARIE:

The fact is, Harlan, additions and changes to the new Constitution were proposed, even as the states were being asked to ratify it. So, when the first Congress met, they added the first ten amendments to the Constitution. These amendments are known as the "Bill of Rights," and were ratified by eleven of the thirteen states on December 15th, 1791.

HARLAN:

I'm assuming "ratify" means "approval." We're not talking rodents here.

MARIE:

Yes, Harlan, "approval," not rats, as well you know.

HARLAN:

So, if the first ten amendments are known as the "Bill of Rights," I'll guess the first amendment is where I get my "first amendment rights."

MARIE:

Pretty logical, isn't it? The first amendment is quite famous because it's so important in protecting our rights as individuals, Harlan. It prohibits government-established religion, guarantees freedom of worship, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, the right to assemble, and the right to petition the government.

HARLAN:

Now, the second amendment insures the right to keep and bear arms.

MARIE:

The third prevents the government from keeping soldiers in private homes without the owners' consent.

HARLAN:

The fourth prevents unreasonable search and seizure. So if the government's got a beef with me, they better have good reason to come knocking at my door!

MARIE:

You could (and would) put it that way. Now, the fifth amendment is pretty famous, too.

HARLAN:

Yeah, I've heard people "take the fifth" in trials, but I wasn't sure exactly what it meant.

MARIE:

The fifth amendment offers guarantees against violations in what's called "due process" in criminal cases. No person can be forced to testify against himself, and you cannot be tried for the same crime twice.

HARLAN:

Speaking of trials, the sixth amendment guarantees a fair and speedy trial, an impartial jury, and the right to an attorney in all criminal cases.

MARIE:

The seventh guarantees a jury trial in major non-criminal cases, and the eighth amendment prohibits excessive fines or bail, and prohibits cruel and unusual punishment.

HARLAN:

Don't you think required courses could be covered under the eighth amendment?

MARIE:

No comment. The ninth amendment says that, although certain rights have been listed in the Constitution, that doesn't mean that "We the People" don't retain other rights that aren't mentioned. And, last but not least, the tenth amendment says that any power not granted to the federal government or specifically prohibited to the states is reserved for the states or the people.

HARLAN:

"We the People." What if we want to make more amendments?

MARIE:

Well, Article V of the Constitution established amendment procedures, so the Constitution can be modified as necessary.

HARLAN:

I'd like to propose an amendment.

MARIE:

Well you certainly have the right to. This oughta be good.

HARLAN:

"All men named Harlan who have reached their 25th birthday shall be given a tax-free income for life equal to that of the President."

MARIE:

Yeah, Harlan, that makes a lot of sense.

HARLAN:

To me. Oh, wait a second. There, that ought to improve my chances. So, how do I get this amendment, as you so constitutionally put it, "ratified"?

MARIE:

Well, you either have to convince two-thirds of both houses of Congress...

HARLAN:

The House Of Representatives and the Senate, right?

MARIE:

Right.... to propose your amendment...

HARLAN:

Sounds unlikely

MARIE:

Sounds impossible. Or...

HARLAN:

Yeah, what's the other way? Any easier?

MARIE:

Afraid not. The legislatures of two-thirds of the states would have to apply to Congress for a Constitutional Convention for the purpose of passing your improbable amendment.

HARLAN:

Then what?

MARIE:

Then your amendment would have to ratified...

HARLAN:

You love that word, don't you?

MARIE:

By the legislatures of three-fourths of the states, or by conventions in three-fourths of the states. In other words...

HARLAN:

Not a chance, huh?

MARIE:

Nada.

HARLAN:

So what kind of amendments have we created?

MARIE:

Twenty-seven amendments have been ratified - and, yes, I do like that word - including: The prohibition of slavery and ensuring the right to vote regardless of race; Establishing the right of women to vote; Limiting the President to two terms in office; and lowering the voting age to 18.

HARLAN:

I've got a question: What if we pass an amendment and then change our minds?

MARIE:

Ever heard of Prohibition?

HARLAN:

Sure. Al Capone. Elliott Ness. Gangsters. Oh, I love those movies.

MARIE:

Well, it wasn't just in the movies, Harlan. In fact, the 18th amendment prohibited the sale of liquor in the United States, but later we changed our minds and passed the 21st amendment which repealed the 18th amendment. Kind of an un-amendment.

HARLAN:

You know, Marie, all this talk about the Constitution and Philadelphia - I'm starting to get that strange urge I...

HARLAN AND MARIE:

...always seem to get about now. FIELD TRIP!!!

HARLAN:

Well, here we are, Independence Hall, built in 1732, as I recall.

MARIE:

Built in 1732, as you just read in the brochure.

HARLAN:

Hey, I'll bet that's one of those "farmers" of the Constitution.

MARIE:

"Framers" of the Constitution, Harlan!

HARLAN:

Jefferson, right?

MARIE:
Washington Harlan.

HARLAN:
Yeah, I knew that.

MARIE:
But over there is the Graff House where Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence.

HARLAN:
I wonder how many quills he went through!

MARIE:
Ooh, come on, let's go see the Liberty Bell.

HARLAN:
Bummer of a crack.

MARIE:
Oh, I think it adds character, like those lines on your face.

HARLAN:
Very funny. Marie, I'm getting hungry and, you know, Philadelphia's famous for cheese steak sandwiches. I'm a little short on cash. I don't suppose there's an ATM in here, is there?

MARIE:
No, but you could visit the First Bank of the United States.

HARLAN:
Awesome.

MARIE:
Well, I'm visiting Independence Hall.

HARLAN:
Whatever. Catch you at the plane. Don't be late again!

MARIE:
I'm almost never late! Well, hardly ever. Oh, wow! This is so beautiful! I'm glad Harlan isn't here; I'd have to hear more quill and penmanship jokes. Wow, that's George Washington's chair! Being here makes history come alive for me. Oh, I've gotta watch my time! Harlan, I hope those coolers aren't all filled with Philly cheese steaks!

HARLAN:
No, of course not. I packed my clothes in some of them. Hey, Marie, what are all these charges for excess baggage?

MARIE:
Oh, nothing.

HARLAN:
Nothing? A 2,080 pound excess weight baggage fee is nothing? Marie, you didn't steal the Liberty Bell, did you?

MARIE:
Of course not! It's just an authentic reproduction for my home.

HARLAN:
Oh, speaking of...

HARLAN & MARIE:
HOME!

MARIE:
Wow! That was fun! Philadelphia is great, but I'm glad to be back, and I'm ready for one of our soon-to-be-famous painless reviews.

HARLAN:
This ought to be good.

MARIE:
What?

HARLAN:
I said, "I wish you would."

MARIE:
Ready? I promise this won't hurt a bit.

HARLAN:
My seatbelt is latched and I've returned my tray table in the full upright position. Shoot!

MARIE:
The Constitution is the framework of our federal system of government. It established three branches of government, limiting the powers of each and providing a system of checks and balances. The legislative branch has the power to make laws, the executive branch has the power to carry out and enforce laws, and the judicial branch has the power to handle conflicts over the enforcement, application, and interpretation of laws. The Constitution is the supreme law of the land and can be amended from time to time. The first ten amendments are called the "Bill Of Rights" and 16 other amendments have been made over the years.

HARLAN:

Wow! Painless and fast!

MARIE:

Thank you! And I think pretty interesting as well.

HARLAN:

Particularly our field trip. I love Philadelphia and those Philly cheese steak sandwiches were good for my constitution!

MARIE:

Oh, Harlan, my Liberty Bell looks great in our belfry.

HARLAN:

Well, I always knew you were bats, Marie, never knew you had a belfry though.

MARIE:

You know, when you went to the First Bank in Philadelphia, I saw Betsy Ross.

HARLAN:

Really? You know Tom Jefferson and I had shared Philly cheese steak at the City Tavern!

THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Article. I.

Section. 1.

All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Section. 2.

The House of Representatives shall be composed of Members chosen every second Year by the People of the several States, and the Electors in each State shall have the Qualifications requisite for Electors of the most numerous Branch of the State Legislature.

No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the Age of twenty five Years, and been seven Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives and direct Taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective Numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole Number of free Persons, including those bound to Service for a Term of Years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other Persons. The actual Enumeration shall be made within three Years after the first Meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent Term of ten Years, in such Manner as they shall by Law direct. The Number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty Thousand, but each State shall have at Least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to chuse three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New-York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware one, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.

When vacancies happen in the Representation from any State, the Executive Authority thereof shall issue Writs of Election to fill such Vacancies.

The House of Representatives shall chuse their Speaker and other Officers; and shall have the sole Power of Impeachment.

Section. 3.

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof for six Years; and each Senator shall have one Vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in Consequence of the first Election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three Classes. The Seats of the Senators of the first Class shall be vacated at the Expiration of the second Year, of the second Class at the Expiration of the fourth Year, and of the third Class at the Expiration of the sixth Year, so that one third may be chosen every second Year; and if Vacancies happen by Resignation, or otherwise, during the Recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary Appointments until the next Meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such Vacancies.

No Person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty Years, and been nine Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no Vote, unless they be equally divided.

The Senate shall chuse their other Officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the Absence of the Vice President, or when he shall exercise the Office of President of the United States.

The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments. When sitting for that Purpose, they shall be on Oath or Affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present.

Judgment in Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States: but the Party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to Law.

Section. 4.

The Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by Law make or alter such Regulations, except as to the Places of chusing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every Year, and such Meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by Law appoint a different Day.

Section. 5.

Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members, and a Majority of each shall constitute a Quorum to do Business; but a smaller Number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the Attendance of absent Members, in such Manner, and under such Penalties as each House may provide.

Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.

Each House shall keep a Journal of its Proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such Parts as may in their Judgment require Secrecy; and the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.

Neither House, during the Session of Congress, shall, without the Consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other Place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

Section. 6.

The Senators and Representatives shall receive a Compensation for their Services, to be ascertained by Law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all Cases, except Treason, Felony and Breach of the Peace, be privileged from Arrest during their Attendance at the Session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any Speech or Debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other Place.

No Senator or Representative shall, during the Time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil Office under the Authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the Emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no Person holding any Office under the United States, shall be a Member of either House during his Continuance in Office.

Section. 7.

All Bills for raising Revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with Amendments as on other Bills.

Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States: If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the Objections at large on their Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such Reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the Bill, it shall be sent, together with the Objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a Law. But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be a Law.

Every Order, Resolution, or Vote to which the Concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of Adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the Same shall take Effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the Rules and Limitations prescribed in the Case of a Bill.

Section. 8.

The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow Money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes;

To establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization, and uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin Money, regulate the Value thereof, and of foreign Coin, and fix the Standard of Weights and Measures;

To provide for the Punishment of counterfeiting the Securities and current Coin of the United States;

To establish Post Offices and post Roads;

To promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts, by securing for limited Times to Authors and Inventors the exclusive Right to their respective Writings and Discoveries;

To constitute Tribunals inferior to the supreme Court;

To define and punish Piracies and Felonies committed on the high Seas, and Offences against the Law of Nations;

To declare War, grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal, and make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water;

To raise and support Armies, but no Appropriation of Money to that Use shall be for a longer Term than two Years;

To provide and maintain a Navy;

To make Rules for the Government and Regulation of the land and naval Forces;

To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining, the Militia, and for governing such Part of them as may be employed in the Service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively, the Appointment of the Officers, and the Authority of training the Militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;

To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other needful Buildings;—And

To make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers, and all other Powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any Department or Officer thereof.

Section. 9.

The Migration or Importation of such Persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the Year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a Tax or duty may be imposed on such Importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each Person.

The Privilege of the Writ of Habeas Corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in Cases of Rebellion or Invasion the public Safety may require it.

No Bill of Attainder or ex post facto Law shall be passed.

No Capitation, or other direct, Tax shall be laid, unless in Proportion to the Census or enumeration herein before directed to be taken.

No Tax or Duty shall be laid on Articles exported from any State.

No Preference shall be given by any Regulation of Commerce or Revenue to the Ports of one State over those of another; nor shall Vessels bound to, or from, one State, be obliged to enter, clear, or pay Duties in another.

No Money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by Law; and a regular Statement and Account of the Receipts and Expenditures of all public Money shall be published from time to time.

No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince, or foreign State.

Section. 10.

No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.

No State shall, without the Consent of the Congress, lay any Imposts or Duties on Imports or Exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection Laws: and the net Produce of all Duties and Imposts, laid by any State on Imports or Exports, shall be for the Use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such Laws shall be subject to the Revision and Controul of the Congress.

No State shall, without the Consent of Congress, lay any Duty of Tonnage, keep Troops, or Ships of War in time of Peace, enter into any Agreement or Compact with another State, or with a foreign Power, or engage in War, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent Danger as will not admit of delay.

Article. II.

Section. 1.

The executive Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his Office during the Term of four Years, and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same Term, be elected, as follows:

Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no Senator or Representative, or Person holding an Office of Trust or Profit under the United States, shall be appointed an Elector.

The Electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by Ballot for two Persons, of whom one at least shall not be an Inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a List of all the Persons voted for, and of the Number of Votes for each; which List they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the Seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the Certificates, and the Votes shall then be counted. The Person having the greatest Number of Votes shall be the President, if such Number be a Majority of the whole Number of Electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such Majority, and have an equal Number of Votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately chuse by Ballot one of them for President; and if no Person have a Majority, then from the five highest on the List the said House shall in like Manner chuse the President. But in chusing the President, the Votes shall be taken by States, the Representation from each State having one Vote; A quorum for this purpose shall consist of a Member or Members from two thirds of the States, and a Majority of all the States shall be necessary to a Choice. In every Case, after the Choice of the President, the Person having the greatest Number of Votes of the Electors shall be the Vice President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal Votes, the Senate shall chuse from them by Ballot the Vice President.

The Congress may determine the Time of chusing the Electors, and the Day on which they shall give their Votes; which Day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any Person be eligible to that Office who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United States.

In Case of the Removal of the President from Office, or of his Death, Resignation, or Inability to discharge the Powers and Duties of the said Office, the Same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by Law provide for the Case of Removal, Death, Resignation or Inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what Officer shall then act as President, and such Officer shall act accordingly, until the Disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

The President shall, at stated Times, receive for his Services, a Compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the Period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that Period any other Emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Before he enter on the Execution of his Office, he shall take the following Oath or Affirmation: —"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Section. 2.

The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual Service of the United States; he may require the Opinion, in writing, of the principal Officer in each of the executive Departments, upon any Subject relating to the Duties of their respective Offices, and he shall have Power to grant Reprieves and Pardons for Offences against the United States, except in Cases of Impeachment.

He shall have Power, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, to make Treaties, provided two thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States, whose Appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by Law: but the Congress may by Law vest the Appointment of such inferior Officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the Courts of Law, or in the Heads of Departments.

The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session.

Section. 3.

He shall from time to time give to the Congress Information of the State of the Union, and recommend to their Consideration such Measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary Occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in Case of Disagreement between them, with Respect to the Time of Adjournment, he may adjourn them to such Time as he shall think proper; he shall receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers; he shall take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed, and shall Commission all the Officers of the United States.

Section. 4.

The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.

Article III.

Section. 1.

The judicial Power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges, both of the supreme and inferior Courts, shall hold their Offices during good Behaviour, and shall, at stated Times, receive for their Services a Compensation, which shall not be diminished during their Continuance in Office.

Section. 2.

The judicial Power shall extend to all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their Authority;—to all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls;—to all Cases of admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction;—to Controversies to which the United States shall be a Party;—to Controversies between two or more States;—between a State and Citizens of another State—between Citizens of different States,—between Citizens of the same State claiming Lands under Grants of different States, and between a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.

In all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, and those in which a State shall be Party, the supreme Court shall have original Jurisdiction. In all the other Cases before mentioned, the supreme Court shall have appellate Jurisdiction, both as to Law and Fact, with such Exceptions, and under such Regulations as the Congress shall make.

The Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment, shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial shall be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed.

Section. 3.

Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying War against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court.

The Congress shall have Power to declare the Punishment of Treason, but no Attainder of Treason shall work Corruption of Blood, or Forfeiture except during the Life of the Person attainted.

Article. IV.

Section. 1.

Full Faith and Credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, Records, and judicial Proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general Laws prescribe the Manner in which such Acts, Records and Proceedings shall be proved, and the Effect thereof.

Section. 2.

The Citizens of each State shall be entitled to all Privileges and Immunities of Citizens in the several States.

A Person charged in any State with Treason, Felony, or other Crime, who shall flee from Justice, and be found in another State, shall on Demand of the executive Authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having Jurisdiction of the Crime.

No person held to Service or Labour in one State, under the Laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in Consequence of any Law or Regulation therein, be discharged from such Service or Labour, but shall be delivered up on Claim of the Party to whom such Service or Labour may be due.

Section. 3.

New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the Jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the Junction of two or more States, or Parts of States, without the Consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Section. 4.

The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government, and shall protect each of them against Invasion; and on Application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic Violence.

Article. V.

The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose Amendments to this Constitution, or, on the Application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a Convention for proposing Amendments, which, in either Case, shall be valid to all Intents and Purposes, as Part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other Mode of Ratification may be proposed by the Congress; Provided that no Amendment which may be made prior to the Year One thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any Manner affect the first and fourth Clauses in the Ninth Section of the first Article; and that no State, without its Consent, shall be deprived of its equal Suffrage in the Senate.

Article. VI.

All Debts contracted and Engagements entered into, before the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation.

This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.

The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the Members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial Officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by Oath or Affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious Test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any Office or public Trust under the United States.

Article. VII.

The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States, shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the Same.

BILL OF RIGHTS

Amendment I

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble; and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Amendment II

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

Amendment III

No Soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the Owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

Amendment IV

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Amendment V

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life liberty, or property, without due process or law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

Amendment VI

In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favour, and to have the Assistance of Counsel for his defense.

Amendment VII

In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re- examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

Amendment VIII

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted.

Amendment IX

The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

Amendment X

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

Subject: The U.S. Constitution Date _____

Directions: After reading the following passages, determine whether the speaker was a Federalist or an Anti-Federalist. Underline the statement or statements which led you to draw that conclusion.

Anti-Federalists—Persons who opposed the adoption of the Constitution between 1787 - 1788; they were in favor of adopting the Bill of Rights as well as strong state governments.

Federalists—Persons who supported the adoption of the Constitution in 1787-1788; most became members of the Federalist Party after the Constitution was adopted; believed in a strong federal government

James Wilson: _____

The gentlemen tell you that they expect the States will not possess any power. But, I think there I reason to draw a different conclusion. Under this system, their respectability and power will increase with that of the general government. I believe their happiness and security will increase in still greater proportion.

In order to keep republics together, they must have a strong binding force, which must be either external or internal. The situation of this country shows, that no foreign force can press us together; the bonds of our union ought therefore to be indissolubly strong.

If it is meant that the general government will destroy the government of the States, I will admit that such a government would not suit the people... But that description does not apply to the system before you. This, instead of placing the state governments in jeopardy, is founded on their existence. On this principle, its organization depends; it must stand or fall, as the State governments are secured or ruined....

What is the interest of the whole, must, on the great scale, be the interest of every part. It will be the duty of the State, as of an individual, to sacrifice her own convenience to the general good.

Patrick Henry: _____

Here I would make this inquiry of those worthy characters that composed a part of the late federal Convention... I have the highest regard for those gentlemen; but sir allow me to demand - What right had they to say, "We the people"? ... Who authorized them to speak the language of "We, the people" Instead of "We, the states"? States are the characteristics and the soul of the confederation. If the states are not the agents of this agreement, it must be one great consolidated national government of the people of all the states.

It was expressly declared in our Confederation that every right was retained by the states, respectively, which was not given up to the government of the United States. But there is not such thing here. You, therefore, by a natural and unavoidable implication, give up your rights to the general government.

If you give up these powers, without a Bill of Rights, you will exhibit the most absurd thing to mankind that ever the world saw - government that abandoned its powers of direct taxation, the sword, and the purse. You have disposed of the to Congress, without a Bill of Rights - without check, limitation, or control.

John Smilie: _____

It is fair and reasonable to infer, that it was contemplation of the framers of this system, to absorb and abolish the efficient authority and independent powers of the several states in order to invigorate and enlarge the general government. Here we find the right of making laws for every purpose is invested in the future governors of America, and in this included the uncontrolled jurisdiction over the purses of the people...The national government may take from the people just what they please.

If then they have unlimited power to drain the wealth of the people in every channel of taxation, the system must be too powerful for any single State, or even for a combination of the states, should an attempt be made to break and destroy the yoke of domination and tyranny which it will hereafter set up... The money which has been raised from the people, may be employed to keep them in a state of slavery... If, under such circumstances, the several States should presume to assert their un-delegated rights, I ask again what balance remains with them to counteract the misuse of power of so powerful a superior?

Edmund Pendleton: _____

An objection is made to the form: the expression "We, the people" is thought improper. Permit me to ask the gentleman who made this objection, who but the people can delegate powers? Who but the people have a right to form government?....

If the objection be that the Union ought to be not of the people but of the state governments, then I think the choice of the former very happy and proper. What have the state governments to do with it? Were they to determine, that people would not, in that case, be the judges upon what terms it was adopted...

It is the interest of the federal government to preserve the state governments; upon the latter the existence of the former depends. The Senate derives its existence immediately from the state legislatures; and the representatives and the president are elected under their direction and control; they also preserve order among the citizens of their respective states, and without order and peace no society can possibly exist...When, therefore, the federal governments, I wonder how any gentleman could conceive an idea of a possibility of the former destroying the latter.

11. How does the Constitution uphold the idea of "We the people..."?

Activity: Bill of Rights Name _____
Subject: The U.S. Constitution Date _____

Directions: Read each of the following situations. With the Bill of Rights as a reference, write the amendment which could be used in the scenario.

1. John Brown is a well-established businessman that has had no prior criminal convictions. For the last five years, he has been purchasing handguns for his personal collection. He has obtained them legally and has a permit to have them in his possession. Which amendment protects his right to have the guns?
2. Sonya Banks was pulled over for a minor traffic violation. When the police officer checked her license, he found out that she did not show up for court when requested on a previous occasion. As a result Sonya was arrested and her bail was set at $1 million dollars. Which amendment was violated as a result of Sonia's arrest and detention?
3. Joe Smith is a recent graduate of the local university in a small town. During his attendance at the university, he noticed that the local police often break up student gatherings and demonstrations for the university. As a result of the police department's actions, Joe wants to start a newspaper. However, a local judge has ordered the police to arrest Joe if he attempts to distribute any publications that question the police. What amendment are the police and judge violating?
4. Members of a local gang have been positively identified as the criminals in a recent robbery. The police know where the gang members store the stolen goods. However, they need a warrant before they can reclaim the stolen goods. Which amendment are the police trying to avoid breaking?
5. When the Founding Fathers wrote the Bill of Rights, they were specifically trying to protect the people of America against unfairness that had been placed upon them while under British rule. One such unfair act was that many colonists were sent to Britain to be tried for crimes that took place in the Colonies. In addition, many of these same people waited many months for their cases to be heard and, as a result, were in prison while they waited. Which amendment did the Founding Fathers create in attempt to prevent this happening?

OF CIVIL GOVERNMENT

by John Locke

John Locke (1632-1704)

John Locke was one of the most influential philosophers with respect to the United States government. He believed in the "natural rights philosophy." This involved how human beings would act in a "state of nature," a condition in which there was no government. Locke believed that there are certain rights one cannot be denied, among them the rights to life, liberty, and property. In a state of nature, there would be people who would take advantage of the lawlessness by depriving others of their natural rights. In order to protect themselves and keep this from happening, people form governments. The people enter into a "social contract" with their government. They agree to give up some of their rights so that the government may protect the people's natural rights. For example, today, people must obey the laws or risk punishment for not doing so. The laws are there to protect the people from each other and to secure their natural rights, the ones that they cannot be denied.

Of Civil Government

If man in the state of Nature be so free as has been said, if he be absolute lord of his own person and possessions, equal to the greatest and subject to nobody, why will he part with his freedom, and subject himself to the domination and control of any other Power? To which it is obvious to answer, that though in the state of Nature he hath such a right, yet the enjoyment of it is very uncertain and constantly exposed to the invasion of others; for all being kings as much as he, every man his equal, and the greater part no strict obsites of equity and justice, the enjoyment of the property he has in this state is very unsafe, very insecure. This make him willing to quit this condition, which however free, is full of fears and continual dangers; and it is not without reason that he seeks out and is willing to join in society with others who are already united, or have a mind to unite for the mutual preservation of their lives, liberties and estates, which I call by the general name - property.

The great and chief end, therefore, of men uniting into commonwealths and putting themselves under government, is the preservation of their property; to which in the state of Nature there are many other things wanting.

Firstly, there wants an established, settled, known law, received and allowed by common consent to be the standard of right and wrong, and the common measure to decide all controversies between them. For though the law of Nature be plain and intelligible to all rational creatures, yet men, being biased by their interest, as well as ignorant for want of study of it, are apt to allow of it as a law binding to them in the application of it to their particular cases.

Secondly, in the state of Nature there wants a known and indifferent judge, with authority to determine all differences according to the established law. For every one in that state being both judge and executioner of the law of Nature, men being partial to themselves, passion and revenge, is very apt to carry them too far, and with too much heat in their own cases, as well as negligence and unconcernedness, makes them too remiss in other men's.

Thirdly, in the state of Nature there often wants power to back and support the sentence when right and to give it due execution. They who by an injustice offended will seldom fail where they are able by force to make good their injustice. Such resistance many times makes the punishment dangerous, and frequently destructive to those who attempt it.

Thus mankind, notwithstanding all the privileges of the state of Nature, being but in an ill condition while they remain in it are quickly driven into society. It is this makes them so willingly give up every one his single power of punishing to be exercised by such alone as shall be appointed to it amongst them, and by such rules as the community, or those authorized by them to that purpose, shall agree on. And in this we have the original right and rise of both legislative and executive power as well as of the governments and societies themselves.

For in the state of Nature to omit the liberty he has of innocent delights, a man has two powers. The first is to do whatsoever he thinks fit for the preservation of himself and others within the permission of the law of Nature; by which law, common to them all, he and all the rest of mankind are one community, make up one society distinct from all other creatures, and were it not for the corruption and viciousness of degenerate men, there would be no need of any other, no necessity that men should separate from this great and natural community, and associate into lesser combinations. The other power a man has in the state of Nature is the power to punish the crimes committed against that law. Both these he gives up when he joins in a particular society and incorporates into any commonwealth separate from the rest of mankind.

The first power is of doing whatsoever he thought fit for the preservation of himself and the rest of mankind, he gives up to be regulated by laws made by the society, so far forth as the preservation of himself and the rest of that society shall require; which laws of the society in many things confine the liberty he had by the law of nature.

Secondly, the power of punishing he wholly gives up, and engages his natural force, which he might before employ in the execution of the law of Nature, by his own single authority, as he thought fit. To assist the executive power of the society as the law therein shall require. For being now in a new state, wherein he is to enjoy many conveniences from the labour, assistance, and society of others in the same community, as well as protection from its whole strength, he is to part also with as much of his natural liberty, providing for himself, as the good, prosperity, and safety of the society shall require, which is not only necessary but just, since the other members of the society do the like.

But though men when they enter into society give up the equality, liberty, and executive power they had in the state of Nature into the hands of the society, to be so far disposed of by the legislative as the good of the society shall require, yet it being only with an intention in every one the better to preserve himself, his liberty and property (for a rational creature cannot be supposed to change his condition with an intention to be worse), the power of the society of legislative constituted by them can never be supposed to extend farther than the common good, but is obliged to secure every one's property by providing against those three defects above mentioned that made the state of Nature so unsafe and uneasy. And so, whoever has the legislative or supreme power of any commonwealth, is bound to govern by established standing laws, promulgated and known to the people, and not by extemporary decrees, by indifferent and upright judges, who are to decide controversies by those laws; and to employ the force of the community at home only in the execution of such laws, or abroad to prevent or redress foreign injuries and secure the community from inroads and invasion. And all this to be directed to no other end but the peace, safety, and public good of the people.

DU CONTRACT SOCIAL by Jean Jacques Rousseau

Jean Jacques Rousseau (1712-1778)

Rousseau's philosophy of government builds on Locke's. Indeed, his major political work is called The Social Contract (in French: Du Contract Social). However, unlike Locke, he did not believe that the majority would always act for the common good. Instead, he felt that government's role was to ensure that the common good, or general welfare, was protected. To achieve this, the people gave up some of their rights to the government.

Du Contract Social

Man is born free; yet he is everywhere in chains. One man holds himself the sovereign master of other men - but he is a slave in greater part than they.

What was the mode of this change?

Is it legitimate?

I cannot answer the first question but I can answer the second.

Should we seek an answer in force and the most obvious results which spring from force, we should retort; "If a people obeys through force it does well; but immediately it is able to shake off its yoke, it does better; for in this way a people regains its liberty just as it lost that liberty. Thus the people is acting in a just way for there was no justification in the act which took their liberty from them.

And yet man's right to join other men in social order is the sacred right from which all others grow. And this right is not an extension of Nature; it rests altogether on man's own contracting power.

Suppose that men (in the state of Nature) have arrived at such a point where the obstacles which endanger their existence overcome by their strength those forces which each individual can employ to maintain himself in that state. Then the human race perishes if it does not change its mode of life. As men cannot themselves create new forces, but only unify and direct those which exist, they have no other means of preserving themselves than to form together a force which can overcome resistance...To find a form of association which defends and protects with all its combined forces the person, and goods of each member, and by means of which each person, uniting with all, yet remains as free as before, - such is the problem of which the Social Contract gives the solution...

Each one is giving himself to all, gives himself to none. For whereas there is no associate to whom one does not concede the same rights which he concedes himself, one gains the equivalent of what one loses, and more force to retain what one possesses. If one discards from the Social Contract all that is not essential, one will find it reduced to the following terms: each one of us in common puts his person and his powers under supreme direction of the general will...At once, instead of the individual personality of each person, this act of association produces a collective and moral body, composed of as many members as have a voice in the assembly...I say that sovereignty, being nothing else than the exercise of the general will, can never be alienated, and that the sovereign who is only a collective being can not be represented but by himself. Powers can be delegated, but not sovereignty.

THE SOCIAL CONTRACT DEFINED

Social Contract

Men within a given area joined together, and each agreed to give up to the State as much power as was needed to promote the safety and well-being of all. In the contract (a constitution of sorts), the members of the state created a government to exercise the powers they had voluntarily granted to the State.
